With the new immigration flows, such as Central and Eastern Europe, that number will only increase. Unfortunately multilingualism not get the attention it deserves. But language policy without regard to multilingualism reduces opportunities in education of children with a non-Dutch background. Schools must adapt their teaching to these kids. This requires scientific knowledge is needed about the effectiveness of interventions and methodologies. This single magazine are inspiring contributions of scientists, educators and parents.
Pavlov	popular-science television program	29 nov. 2012 (in Dutch)	The Public Broadcasting		Victoria is one of the most versatile young actresses of Netherlands. At the age of 13 she came from Ukraine to the Netherlands. Did she benefit thereof? And what is a linguistic talent anyway? Twelve years ago, she debuted in GTST and since then she played numerous roles in TV series and movies. Yet she has the language in which she acts only in later life learned. At the gymnasium she excelled in Latin. And now she also speaks fluent English, German and French. She's just smart or she has an extraordinary talent for languages? Is she another person in another language? What happens in her brain when she speaks so many languages?
